2. takara nipaluna: Aboriginal walking tour

Walking tour takes 90 minutes

Following the footsteps of the Aboriginal resistance fighters in 1832, this immersive walk retraces their path as they made their way to the old Government House, where they sought to negotiate an end to the Black War. Led by indigenous guides, this tour stands as the only Aboriginal-led experience of its kind in nipaluna/Hobart, making it an essential and transformative journey for all.

Under Nunami Sculthorpe-Green's guidance, this powerful tour not only sheds light on the past but also highlights the ongoing presence and contributions of the palawa people in shaping our city's identity. Don't miss this chance to gain a deeper understanding and appreciation for the rich Aboriginal heritage woven into the fabric of our community.

This is a historical story-telling tour that combines the history of lutruwita Tasmania with a style of presentation and storytelling like no other on the market. Initially developed through a performing arts lens and first presented through Ten Days on the Island Festival, it is truly unlike any other on the market.

The price of the bookings secures a private tour at the date and time suitable to the group.

Complete with experienced guide and personal audio equipment.

A handout for extra information and further resources is offered at the end of each tour.

Maximum number: 35-40

Cost: $AUD 50

3. Callington Mill Distillery, Oatlands

Callington Mill, lies in Tasmania's picturesque Heartlands. It was built in 1837 for two reasons: to legally grind flour, and to illegally make whisky. After nearly two hundred years, we're proud to return the mill to its original, illicit purpose - now perfectly legal, of course.

Oatlands is one of Tasmania's oldest settlements with over 150 sandstone buildings gracing its streets. The impressive Georgian buildings of the 1800s have found new life and are now home to cosy cafes, antique stores, galleries and boutique accommodation.
